Unveiling a monumental moment in their musical journeys, Busterkun & Mt. Sierra team up to release their debut collaboration track – "Vendetta" – featuring a new duo alias, Low Hanging Fruit. The long-awaited release not only marks their first official partnership but also introduces a fresh, dynamic identity in the electronic music scene.

"Vendetta" delivers vibrant house rhythm blends and prevailing techno beats, crafted with sounds that drew inspiration from artists like Odd Mob. The track incorporates stabs reminiscent of Busterkun's latest single release – "Blasé" – while still assuming its own unique energy and creative alterations.

This experimental approach has culminated into an electric collaboration with a message of resilience and ambition. Busterkun shares, "The lyrics pretty much carry a 'Don't underestimate us; we will rise to the top' kind of vibe."

As Busterkun & Mt. Sierra venture into this new partnership with Low Hanging Fruit, "Vendetta" is an initial promise of their musical prowess and artistic evolution.

Artist Bio - Busterkun

Masked behind his babushka, Busterkun's artistry is a prime example of cultural melding at its finest. Hailing from the Philippines, but raised in LA's lifestyle, the self-taught DJ-producer commands dancefloors with his unique flow of genre blending. The artist's keen ear and versatility allows him to effortlessly mix between genres; in turn, curating his own creative twist to align his upbringing directly to his music. Crate digging the best of hip-hop, house, and techno, Busterkun aims to create an energy in his sets that will bring you a one-of-a-kind experience.

Initially entering the scene as a self-taught Logic Pro music producer, Busterkun takes his talent to the next level as he dives into Ableton to perfect the intricacies of his sound design, exemplifying his grit and tenacity through his hard work ethic and refined music releases. Busterkun has already solidified his eclectic taste in the scene with his latest release – "Blasé" – as well as his contribution to The Music Dealers' techno flip of EazyE's "Boyz-n-the-Hood".

As Busterkun embarks on his journey with The Music Dealers, the promising artist positions his sets to create an experience – not one where you seek a certain sound, but rather immersed in an energy with undeniable electricity. Unmasked through his music, Busterkun's unique style paves the way to bring the crowd on an experience of a lifetime.

Originally from El Paso, Texas, Matthew Sierra is now based in Los Angeles and embracing a new musical direction. Known professionally as Mt. Sierra, he is shifting towards a darker, techno-inspired style of dance music. Mt. Sierra has gained recognition in the local community for his captivating melodies and distinctive fusion of progressive, deep, and tech house beats.

Having a natural affinity for beautiful tunes, Mt. Sierra seamlessly transitioned from his love of big room, tech, and progressive house to dive deeper into other genres within the electronic music scene. Transitioning his artistry in 2019, he rebranded from his previous persona, Matt Yo, as he recognized the disparity between his passion for emotive, progressive music and his former brand.

Despite numerous challenges, Mt. Sierra launched his new project in 2020 to showcase his artistic vision. He aims to make waves in the dance music industry, targeting renowned labels and prestigious events. With a dedication to let his music speak for itself, anticipate an exciting journey with Mt. Sierra as he takes his new techno-infused style to the forefront of the music scene.
